This class will be conducted on Zoom so please be familiar with that platform.

The nose is the closest feature of the face when you are looking at it head-on. Understanding how to construct it will give you more confidence when doing portraits.

Spend a few hours learning or re-learning key aspects and methods of understanding how to construct a head and its features. Once you have grasped these ideas, you will enjoy finding these relationships and looking for shapes. Nomi will be our live model. You will also receive numerous handouts.

If you have made some drawings that lack convincing noses, please bring a few of them to practice on—but not required.

Anita Lovitt is a respected teacher of watercolor and drawing. She learned artistic anatomy at the Art Students' League in New York City, under the tutelage of the revered lecturer Robert Beverly Hale.
